We are fortunate. a handful of weeks ago, our mother was diagnosed with breast cancer. why does that make us feel fortunate? because we held hope in our hearts the minute the words were spoken.

our 4th year of Wings of Hope is a celebration of what we, the daughters, granddaughters and friends of women fighting breast cancer, have learned.

there is always hope.

in the past, the first emotions many women and their families felt when diagnosed with cancer were fear and hopelessness. today, women know it is a fight that can be won.

our mother is currently cancer free. she still has procedures and radiation to complete, but a blink of time took us from sitting in her living room with tears to sitting in her living room celebrating a successful fight. but we know it's not over.

"Wings of Hope" has been a gift to us . . . teaching us that we are fortunate to feel hope when faced with breast cancer. that is why, on november 8th, 10% of all of our sales will be donated to the Susan Henke Miller Breast Cancer Research Fund that directly supports local research efforts to find a cure for cancer.

with eternal hope,

sloane & casey simmons
sisters, co-owners, and believers in hope
